

Do you want to develop your creative skills, meet like-minded people, network with publishers and writers?

Do you want to get involved in a one-off creative event for young people in your community, this summer?

We're looking for young people to devise and deliver the MyVoice Roadshow – a reading and writing roadshow that's part of a national programme, managed by The Reading Agency and supported by Arts Council England.

If you're aged between 11 and 19 and want to be involved in the MyVoice Roadshow (23-30 July 2011) get in touch!

Planning meetings start in April. All planning meetings will be outside of school/college/office hours and your travel costs will be reimbursed.

You will:

- Get experience as an events manager and promoter - a useful skill for a wide range of careers, from gig promoter to festival organiser, exhibition curator or wedding planner!
- Meet writers, work with publishers and build your network of contacts in the creative sector
- Make the MyVoice Roadshow the event that YOU want to see – with writers, artists, and musicians that you choose to get involved; created, curated, branded and marketed through your ideas, in collaboration with creative professionals
- Learn how to use the latest digital tools and techniques for the online platform
- Create a lasting, memorable event in your community for other young people
- Get work experience that you can shout about in job interviews and use as a CV booster
- Take part in an accredited awards scheme that can open doors to employers and apprenticeships
- Build your confidence, communication skills, teamwork and leadership ability
- Develop your own creative expression

Come along to <insert library name> on <insert date/time> to find out more, or contact <insert library contact name > on <insert email / phone>

<Insert library logo above>

